Actually, it's not that bad. But for its price it doesn't bring anything like other games would bring onto the table. There are some bugs and the worst thing about this game is boss fights are too short and not challenging as casual levels.

You have to drop bombs on buildings from your plane, but the game is designed so that you don't know whether the bombs will drop from the middle or rear of your plane.
That's about as stupid as having a shooting game where you don't know if the bullets are going to shoot out of the end of the barrel or sideways from the stock. How many people would play Counter Strike if the weapons were designed like that?

Each time after you do a fly-over of the buildings, you drop down a notch, so that if you don't destroy all of the buildings you will crash into them when you have dropped down to their level.
However, because you can't drop bombs as fast as you want, that means that if you miss a target (because the game doesn't allow proper aiming) you end up crashing into a building.

Quite frankly, not being able to aim your bombs, in a bombing game, is ridiculous.
That major design flaw was enough to put me off.

In case you can't tell already, my recommendation is that you don't buy this game.
Don't waste your time on this piece of rubbish.
