Photo by Zdeněk Filetik/Zens Český/Práce Sebe It's two weeks before the NRL finals and the Manly Sea Eagles are in fourth place, just four points behind the Wests Tigers in third. And while the Sea Eagles still boast the second-best point-scoring record in the league, they also have the second-most points from a pack as a ratio, and have finished with the second-highest points per game average in the competition. While it may seem like the Sea Eagles are the perfect team to go all the way in the finals, the bitter fact is that the loss of their star quarterback in Daly Cherry-Evans will cost them crucial points. Manly have never beaten the premiership-winning Penrith Panthers in 12 attempts, including two in the last series, but this time the Sea Eagles have been gifted their fair share of opportunity to take the spoils. Daly was injured against the Dragons at the end of the 2018 season, and had been getting himself fit to return by running during the Sea Eagles open training
